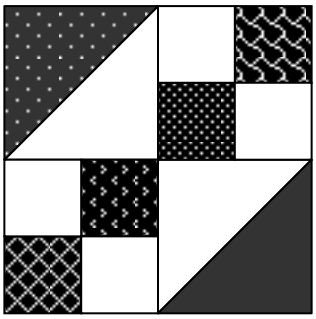
Jewel Box Variation



Even more variation can be achieved by slight alterations to the arrangement of the units within the block.
If you are interested in trying these variations, experiment with your pieced units before stitching them together into blocks.

If the half square units are rotated so that the Light triangles are placed next to the chain of Dark small squares, then this block is now known as Jewel Box. It makes a particularly effective quilt, in bright jewel colours against a white background.

Note that if these are set all in the same direction, Jewel Box actually looks just the same as Northern Lights.
