INTERNATIONAL MACROTERRITORY OF THE TRUTH COMMISSION'S CONTROLL COMMISSION CONTROLL

The Commission for the Clarification of Truth, Coexistence and Non-Repetition (Truth Commission), presents the following key points regarding its work with victims abroad and in exile, to answer some of the most common questions from the Colombians abroad:

- Participating in the Truth Commission does not mean waiving refugee status. Participating in the commission's activities or providing testimonies does not imply that security guarantees in Colombia are restored and that the need for international protection is in question.
- The Truth Commission maintains the confidentiality of its sources and identities will not be revealed, unless expressly requested by the person.
- The Truth Commission is an independent and autonomous body, it does not depend on the Colombian Government, although it has a public nature.
- The Commission will work in several countries through nodes or networks, where individuals, as well as organizations or institutions working with Colombian victims and exiled population can participate.
- Victims may participate in different ways: a) providing their testimony and information about their cases, b) participating in activities carried out by the nodes or support networks in each country, c) attending public or private activities organized by the Commission, such as Truth Gatherings, forums, or outreach initiatives.

- The Commission is not only for one type of victim, but rather for all victims of the FARC, other guerrillas, paramilitary groups or victims of State agents or institutions.
- The Commission will also collect testimonies from those responsible and/or witnesses who have relevant information about violations of human rights or international humanitarian law, which will remain confidential.
- If victims have given their statement to the Victim's Unit or other institutions, they can provide that information as part of the testimony and it can be broadened with the Truth Commission.
- The testimonies will be taken by people who have a confidentiality mandate and the victim's trust, always under the supervision of the Commission.
- The information collected is subject to informatics security procedures and will be available only to the Commission. No other public or private institution will have access to it. When the work of the Commission is done, its information and files will be guarded under confidentiality protocols and accessed only with the consent of the victims, witnesses or declarants.

PARTICIPATION: We aspire to have a full, plural, broad and diverse participation. There will be different ways in which groups and people in exile can participate. The work ahead will require specific individual and collective commitments, as well as significant coordination efforts done with the best possible attitude. We must understand that times are short so we need to be flexible, since it will be impossible to listen to every single person.

- OPERATION in other countries. A lot of coordination, networking, and dialogues between victim organizations and interinstitutional organizations have been taking place in several countries. The Truth Commission tries to make the most of previous experiences that can contribute to and support its work. The goal is to overcome the mistrust among organizations and/or between individuals in exile. We are trying to concentrate efforts to reach the maximum number of victims, including those who do not belong to specific organizations.
- In order to reach INDIVIDUAL VICTIMS who do not belong to specific associations it is key to contact the organizations that process asylum claims (their databases and / or talk to professionals such as lawyers or psychologists who accompany them) and people who have spent long periods of time in exile. We are interested in contacting the most conciliatory of them, since they tend to connect better with individual victims who avoid associations. The circles of trust are our greatest strength.
- REPRESENTATIVITY and INCLUSION. Organizations and/or individuals must avoid appropriating the voices of victims abroad in regards to the collective and individual experiences. Colombians abroad must have clarity on the functions and mission of the Truth Commission's team and that of the accompanying organizations. They must have sufficient information on who can be addressed and which tasks correspond to each individual, association, to the Truth Commission or to external professionals that support its work, be it in psychosocial, artistic transformative actions, or gender, ethnic and generational perspective. The goal is fostering participation, diversity and peaceful coexistence, listening to all the parts involved, and trying the achieve agreements on the tasks that will facilitate cooperative and coordinated work.
- Possible METHODOLOGIES: Taking testimonies, training and organization workshops that generate collective and individual information, Truth Gatherings, public outreach and awareness actions, and international advocacy.
- Teams in each country will ORGANIZE themselves to support the mission of the Truth Commission. The goal is to focus efforts on the objectives (who collects what kind of information, how and when), and to coordinate the territorial coverage
