THE OWNERS

Back in 1899, the house was built as a poorhouse. The associated barn is historically protected because it still stands in its original form. Later, the place functioned as a retirement home, then a boarding house, before the house came into Danish hands in the 1980s, as a school camp, used by Copenhagen day care institutions. Today, the school "Hjuldampen" owns the place, and the building is used as a school camp for the school's own students, and it is rented out to other special schools, companies, or private individuals who want to go on a holiday in Sweden. The name "Hjuldampen" is the Danish word for an old steamboat.
