Washed Coffee

Washed coffee focus solely on the bean. They let you taste what's on the inside, not the outside. Washed coffee depend almost 100% on the bean having absorbed enough natural sugars and nutrients during its growing cycle.

Natural Coffee

The natural process, also known as the dry process, is a back-to-basics approach that stems from Indonesia. The fruit remains on the bean, and dries undisturbed.

Honey/Pulped Coffee

Although the name actually comes from how sticky the beans get during processing. In many ways, this type of coffee is halfway between a washed coffee and a natural process coffee
