One of Our Commodity Export is - Tropical Fruit

SALAK PONDOH

Snake Fruit / Salacca Fruit

HS. Code : 0810.90.91.00

Its popularity (compared with other cultivars) among local Indonesian consumers is mainly due to the intensity of its aroma, which can be overripe and sweaty even before full maturation.

The fruit grow in clusters at the base of the palm, and are also known as snake fruit due to the reddish-brown scaly skin.

They are about the size and shape of a ripe fig, with a distinct tip. The pulp is edible. The fruit can be peeled by pinching the tip, which should cause the skin to slough off so it can be pulled away.

The fruit inside consists of three lobes with the largest of the three containing a large inedible seed. The lobes resemble, and have the consistency of, large peeled garlic cloves. The taste is usually sweet, but its apple-like texture can vary from very dry and crumbly to moist and crunchy.

INTRODUCING SALACCA
AS HIGH POTENTIAL
EXPORT COMMODITY

PREPARING AND TEACHING ALL FARMERS
TO PRODUCE HIGH QUALITY SALACCA

Salak has extraordinary properties for our health. The Latin name of this fruit is Salacca zalacca. The white flesh of the salak fruit turns out to be high in nutrients.

Salak fruit has a lot of nutritional content, including energy, protein, carbohydrates, fat, calcium, phosphorus, iron, vitamin C, fiber, several grams of B vitamins and minerals. The flesh of the fruit is white with the seeds of the fruit the same color as the skin of the fruit. The taste of salak fruit varies, some are sweet and some are sweet mixed with a little sour but still delicious to enjoy
