Dear teachers,

I am writing to inform you that I have had ENOUGH! I think you should let me take a break from being your kettle for the following reasons...

Firstly, I understand that you are working from home now, but that does not mean that you can expect me to boil water every half an hour so that you can have a fresh cup of tea. Do you know how exhausting, repetitive and BORING it is to boil water?

Additionally, if you let me take just one week's holiday, I promise I will come back a much better kettle. After I've had my relaxing break, I know I will be able to boil water for your enormous cups of tea much more efficiently. That means you won't have to wait so long for your hot drinks!

My good friend, the Microwave, agrees that you have been using us kitchen appliances much, much more often now. All I am asking is that you treat me with respect, and allow me to take one, tiny, miniscule holiday! Could you find it in your heart to do that?

Your faithful friend,

Kettle
