in their therapy and with themselves...brilliant and beautiful collection of papers and illustrations.'

- Self and Society

'...a thoroughly good book... It is in essence a practical and pragmatic series of essays offering new horizons about art as a vehicle for the understanding and addressing of offending behaviour...'

- AMBOV-Quarterly

'If the Prison Service is to fulfil its stated duty to help prisoners lead law-abiding and useful lives in custody and after release, this book must be one of the more important guides on how to achieve it... art therapy with offenders seems both necessary and desirable at this stage of regime development, and each chapter in this book provides fresh ideas for it.'

- Judge Stephen Tumin, formerly HM Chief Inspector of Prisons

This is the first collection of art therapy work concerned exclusively with offenders. The authors are all experienced art therapists who explore different ways of working, both in groups and with individuals. The book describes how the use of art therapy has grown in adult prisons, young offender institutions, secure psychiatric and probation centres. Examples of work by women and men of many different backgrounds show how art therapy can contribute to the understanding of offenders, and to their own understanding of themselves. This opens up the possibility of personal change, and of developing a more constructive life style.

At a time of great concern about the damaging effects of crime, this book shows a positive way forward.

Marian Liebmann is a qualified art teacher, art therapist and probation officer. She has worked in the field of criminal justice for many years, at a probation day centre, with victims of crime, in a probation field team and in mediation. She has edited many other books in the field, including Arts Approaches to Conflict and Mediation in Context, also published by Jessica Kingsley Publishers.
