ABER

ABER are an Oslo based band consisting of members Hedda Aronssen, Lars Støvland, Eivind Molden Norseng and Oliver James Hardaker.

They first entered the synth-pop music scene back in 2018 with their first single "I don't love you anymore" a breakup song disguised within catchy up beat grooves and melodies. After a run of shows and festivals they continued with two more single releases, "Gold" followed by "Just like you" which cemented their punchy pop sound and love of relatable lyrics. The next single "I'll give in" is due in November 2019 and promises to show a more melancholic and solemn side to the band, with an album following in 2020.

I'LL GIVE IN

With the release of «I'll Give In», we see a darker and more stripped-back side of ABER. Building around a vocoder, the lyrics convey the strains and complexity at the end of a relationship:

«Sometimes you reach a point where you ask yourself; «is this really worth it?!». The answer is probably «no» more often then most of us are willing to admit. When I wrote «I'll Give In», I was actually confronting my own stubbornness - sometimes a relationship just can't (and shouldn't) be saved. The only thing that can make things better, is to move on.» - Hedda, ABER
