

I'll give in

I need to tell you something - something that I've had on my mind too long
'cause when we started this, I
I didn't think that it would carry on

It's this endless war of back and forth and I've grown tired now
Even though I said I'll fight 'til death this needs to end somehow

So I'll give in,
I'll let you win
You know how to get under my skin
But I've been told,
We will all get old
And time spent like this is a sin
So I'll give in

Deep down, there is a chance you might agree
That this was never worth it
But there was no room for apologies

There is too much pride
To change your stride
Believe me, I have tried
I'll avoid this heat
I'll face defeat
And get on with my life

So I'll give in,
I'll let you win
You know how to get under my skin
But I've been told,
We will all get old
And time spent like this is a sin
So I'll give in

This ain't time well spent, no
You won't get it back, just let go
I'll lose if it makes us move on and escape

'cause you see - when we start that path there's no way we'll ever look back except to acknowledge a terrible mistake
