KEŽMAROK

Wooden church, interior

Courtyard of the castle

The wall was started in the 14th century with the building of huge twin fortifications and moats filled with water. Not much is left of the old system – only ruins of the castle main-gate and the reconstructed bastion by the road leading to Levoča.

The history of the local railway station and an evangelical church from 1894 is quite interesting. The design used was originally destined for a church to be built in Egypt. The designer of this church was born in Kežmarok, but the building has all the proper elements of the Egyptian architec-
