

AEUP is supported and hosted by Fondation Maison des Sciences de l'Homme, Paris and Northumbria University Press, Newcastle.

AEUP Association of European University Presses

Contact details

Association of European University Presses (AEUP)
Emmanuelle Corne, executive officer
Fondation Maison des Sciences de l'Homme
54 bd Raspail
75006 Paris, France

Email: info@aeup.eu
Internet: www.aeup.eu

High quality institutional publishing faces increasing demand in the academic community.

Universities and academic institutions have become important partners of scientists in the world of scholarly publishing.

AEUP aims to

- enhance the visibility of member presses
- facilitate communication between them
- link the channels of distribution of books
- share knowledge about all aspects of scholarly publishing
- strengthen our common mission to support scholarly publishing

About AEUP

AEUP is a network of scholarly presses across Europe that are affiliated with a university or academic institution.

AEUP's members

- need to be scholarly publishers with an established reviewing system and/or an editorial board.
- have to be either owned or clearly connected to a university, research institution or scholarly association.
- can be associate members if they collaborate with a university or research institution.

Meet AEUP members

Meet members of the Association of European University Presses (AEUP) at international book fairs like Frankfurt Book Fair.