

No more allergens. Period.

We have made a completely unscientific calculation: in average women have their periods over 40 years, 12 times a year, during each period they use 40 hygiene products.

This means each woman comes in contact with 19,200 hygiene products. The figures are not precise, but they are also not entirely misleading for the average.

What we are trying to say is: that is many hours of repetitive skin contact with a product. And as you might know the risk of developing skin allergy are affected by just that.

If you want to avoid allergens 'down there' please check out the products we have certified so far. They are shipped to more than 100 countries.

NAPPYNAT

Nappynat's objective is to create disposable sanitary products made of natural, high-performing and biodegradable raw materials. They have a series of diapers, but have earlier this year made female sanitary product - offering skin friendly products for babies and women alike.

Their product are sold in Central and Eastern Europe.

ORGANICUP

OrganiCup is the easy, healthy and reusable menstrual cup - THE alternative to disposable period products. It is made from medical-grade silicone, nothing else. 100% free from allergens and harmful chemicals. It offers up to 12 hours of protection (day and night) and creates a minimal amount of waste.

OrganiCup is sold in more than 25 countries and distributed online to more than 149 countries.

GINGERORGANIC

GingerOrganic has since 2015 offered organic sanitary products (pads, maternity pads, panty liners og tampons) of 100% organic cotton.

Their products are free from harmful chemicals, chlorine and last but not least perfume.

GingerOrganic is sold in 8 countries.

KAERLIG

Kaerlig is a series of intimate products manufactured in Denmark. Besides two lubricants there is also a massage oil, and a intimate foam wash. All of these are allergycertified and contribute to a increased sexual well-being.

Kaerlig is made from carefully selected organic and natural ingredients and contains only the best for you and your body.

Kaerlig is sold online in Denmark.

