

We love the sun

We really do. As soon as it shines we do our outmost to get outside and enjoy the rays. But we are aware of protecting our skin and we use enough sunscreen. So exactly how much is enough?

For a grown-up body it means a big handful which equals approximately 40 ml. This means you should buy a 200 ml sunscreen for yourself every week in order to protect your skin.

You can also go for the other option of getting a tan.

The more all-year round possible tan. We have certified selftanners from three different brands sold all over Scandinavia.

DECUBAL

Decubal products doesn't contain any allergy-causing substances or any substances which are suspected of being able to damage the body. Only safe ingredients which protect, moisturize, care for and repair the skin are chosen for Decubal's product range.

Their 20 certified products are sold in Scandinavia, Iceland, Finland and the Baltic states.

MASCHA VANG

Mascha Vang is an educated beautician and awarded blogger of the year 2016 in Denmark. Her series of self tan products leaves a natural summer glow and is of course skin-friendly and allergycertified. The productst are sold in Denmark.

IDA WARG

Ida Warg is a wellknown swedish blogger and vlogger. Whether you need tips regarding style, pregnancy, workouts or beauty she is the one to go to. She launched her selftanning products earlier this year, which are sold in H&M in Sweden and Ählens.

DERMA

Derma is based on a philosophy that all ingredients must have a function and that the products should be a pleasure to use. So whether it's their skincare for men, their laundry detergents or selftan lotion you won't find any colourants or perfume.

Derma's 40 allergycertified products are sold in more than 10 countries.
