

BERLIN INDIE FILM WORKSHOPS*NOVEMBER 19, 2017*FRENZY FILMS*FILM BIZ, FILMMAKING

The Art of Low-Budget Sci Fi Filmmaking

This week-end we were invited to a panel on the Art of Making Low Budget Sci-Fi Films at the inaugural Berlin Sci-Fi FilmFest (<http://www.berlinscifi.com/panel2/>) at the wonderful Babylon Cinema in the city that gave birth to “Metropolis”. It was great to discuss hard sci-fi versus philosophical sci-fi and what can be achieved on a no-to-low budget.

With that in mind, here a list of films made on a shoestring or on modest budgets for all the filmmakers aspiring to delve into the genre:

<https://io9.gizmodo.com/14-recent-scifi-films-that-didnt-need-big-budgets-to-be-1796830465>
(<https://io9.gizmodo.com/14-recent-scifi-films-that-didnt-need-big-budgets-to-be-1796830465>)

Advertisements

TAGGED BERLIN SCI-FI FILMFEST LOW-BUDGET FILMMAKING INDIE FILMMAKING

Published by Frenzy Films

View all posts by Frenzy Films

One thought on “The Art of Low-Budget Sci Fi Filmmaking”

1. dylantidmore says:

NOVEMBER 23, 2017 AT 4:53 PM

If you look at an old archival sci-fi from the 70s (I found Voyage to the Planet of Prehistoric Women on archive.org) that is objectively bad, it has a quirk that still beckons you to watch it. If I were to make a low budget sci-fi, I'd love to influence it with the markably low-budget nostalgia you get from older films. All done with endearment to previous generations of course.

REPLY

WORDPRESS.COM.