Biopharmaceutical Innovation in a Global World

The COVID-19 pandemic showed the world the innovative and can-do spirit of the pharmaceutical industry. And Samuel White is an expert who is willing to give us a deeper insight into the research work, including some global aspects of the subject.

MorphoSys is a biopharmaceutical company based in Planegg south of Munich and Boston, focusing on the development and commercialization of innovative cancer medicines. Samuel White is Chief of Staff and Vice President, Head of Strategic Planning and Commercial Alliance Management at MorphoSys, and during this discussion he will comment on the sector's ups and downs, sharing key insights and learnings from his two decades of experience in the process of bringing medicines in the hands of patients all over the world. This shall include the challenges of a global internal teamwork and external cooperation on virtual communication basis.

Samuel was born in the UK and now lives as Expat with his family in Lenggries, and he will also touch on his expat-views and experience.
