

Crochet for Barbie: BLANKET

Of course, Barbie should have her own blanket, and what can suit her better than pink?

In this (mini) blanket I worked the wider stripes in double crochet and the thinner stripes in single crochet.

That allows crocheting both thin and wide two-row stripes.

Making the stripes two rows, or any even number means that all color changes will be on the same side and I won't need to break the yarn and weave in all those ends...

I plan to add a border to the blanket because it's cute, and it will cover up the color changes.

MATERIALS

- Crochet hook: size US D /3,35mm
- Yarn: Scraps of Cotton 8/4, (Fingering weight cotton yarn)
- Darning needle

ABBREVIATIONS

This pattern uses US abbreviations.

- sc – single crochet
- dc – double crochet
- ch – chain

CROCHET BARBIE BLANKET

Chain 42 with color A

Foundation row: dc in the third stitch from the hook, dc across, turn (40 stitches, the 2 ch does not count as a stitch)

Row 1: ch 2, dc across, turn (40 stitches)

Row 2&3: With color B, ch1, sc across, turn (40 stitches)

Now continue to work in pattern like this:

Row 1&2: With color A, ch 2, dc across, turn (40 stitches)

Row 3&4: With color B, ch1, sc across, turn (40 stitches)

Work these rows until you have made 12 dc stripes in color A and 11 sc stripes in color B

Cut your yarn and weave in the ends.

ADDING A BORDER

If you want to you can crochet a border on your blanket to cover up the yarn strands from the color changes.

Visit dontbesuchasquare.com for instructions on how to do this!

