A Stone with a History

Fauske Marble by Moser operates the historic Norwegian Rose quarry in Northern Norway, above the Arctic Circle. Led by CEO Susan Moser, the company preserves the quarry's long-standing heritage while expanding its portfolio to include Antique Verdatre, Hermelin Dark, and Hermelin Light.

A Rare Geological Treasure

Covering 13.5 hectares, the Fauske quarry is formed from a unique conglomerate renowned for producing highly decorative, internationally recognized marble. Each block reflects the geological richness and natural artistry of the region.

Celebrating Natural Diversity

The company embraces the raw beauty and individuality of every stone. Alongside the classic, homogeneous expressions of Norwegian Rose, Fauske Marble by Moser highlights stones with distinctive colors, patterns, and character, revealing the full spectrum of what the quarry naturally provides.

A Commitment to Sustainability

By utilizing marble that might traditionally be discarded, the quarry reduces waste and promotes a more eco-conscious approach to construction and design. This commitment ensures responsible use of natural resources while offering designers a broader palette of authentic, expressive materials.

Fauske Marble in International Landmarks

Our marbles appear in landmark buildings around the world – from Oslo's Gardermoen Airport to the UN Headquarters in New York and the Norwegian Embassy in Tokyo.
