Major Andrew’s Column

Today we are privileged to have Major Estelle Blake; Chaplain for the Army’s Anti Human Trafficking & Modern Slavery Unit. Their mission is to bring an end to slavery, fight for social justice and respond with compassionate care. Thousands of people are still exploited and sold as slaves. They can be forced to work in the sex trade, as domestic slaves, exploited for criminal activity, or have their organs removed to be sold. The Unit exists to: Prevent modern slavery and the trafficking of people; Protect individuals on their journey from victim to survivor. As part of their work, they support adult survivors in England and Wales through a government contract awarded in 2011. Partnerships with Corps offer space, resources, time to help survivors integrate back into community life. There are volunteering opportunities for us, including first responders, transporting a survivor to a place of safety, mentoring, helping provide welcome packs for survivors when they arrive in the service, assisting with activities in safe houses and outreach hubs. Major Estelle may well expand on this, and she is using the story of the Israelite slaves in Exodus 5 today. We’re really looking forward to an inspiring time.
