

THAMES WALK

by Jan Levy

www.london-artgallery.co.uk

e: jan:london-artgallery.co.uk

The fantastic view looking to the North Bank from the South Bank in London is both breath taking and fascinating from an architectural perspective; showing landmark buildings both old and new.

The original idea was to take one image of the North Bank and to reproduce this in a style changing colour in each image. However, choosing one view was difficult, so the artist has photographed the walk along the Thames. Each image has been graphically manipulated to create an unrealistic scene in terms of colour.

The viewer will notice the iconic St Pauls Cathedral is event in every photograph.

The piece is an edition of 30 which are hand crafted and constructed by the artist.

The overall aim is to create a composition that enhances and invigorates the senses through colour.