The drum sound is accompanying humankind since the beginnings of time. It is in the heart of all spirit oriented cultures across the planet. There is much that a drum can unlock, give access to within oneself. It is an essential, ancient wisdom that comes through its vibration. It points to the sacred that wants to be shared, that is there to be listened to and to find out for yourself.

There is something immensely satisfying about creating something with one's own hands.

The mind tends to get quiet and a full immersion into the creative process takes place.

It is a very child-like quality and I witness it in people over and over again.

During this weekend I offer my craftsmanship skills, knowledge and experience to support you in the process of creating your own music instrument.

There will be space to share what is on our hearts and minds, space for the actual drum creation and possibly music playing in the evenings..

The work flow:

Information about the materials

Frames:

Im mainly making the frames myself sourcing the wood from a local sawmill. I use either beech, ash, elm tree or willow.

Sizes are from 35cm to 55cm circular shape

I bring several frames to choose from so everybody can find what they like.

Skins:

All my skins come from Scandinavia, mainly north of Norway and Sweden. I only use deer and reindeer skins.

None of these animals was shot for its skin, it's a matter of regular hunting where skins would be normally left behind as there is very little use for them.

Tuning system:

I strongly recommend to add a bike tube tuning system (I provide the tubes) into the drum. It may sound strange but it enables you to make your drum play in any conditions.
