Goal

The challenging and meaningful position as a journalist, communications officer, museum officer, copywriter or historian with reference to my several years of media positions and my journalism degree and Master of Science in history from the University of Gothenburg and my year abroad at the University of Wales, Lampeter.

Summary

Journalist and M.A. in history. I express myself rapidly, easily and correctly in spoken and written Swedish and English at an academic level and at an intermediate level in French.

Right now, I'm an editor for Right now, I'm an editor at Gothenburg Natural History Museum. There I am managing the website in Episerver and the social media activities. I'm also writing articles about science.

During the fall of 2021, I was an archivist for Sahlgrenska Academy, University of Gothenburg. In the spring of the same year, I was a writer at Positiva Pengar. There I writing about the economical development. I did between the years 2015 and 2020 enjoy a position as an information officer for Psychiatry Psychosis. There, I wrote journalistic articles for internal and external use for all of the psychiatry for adults at Sahlgrenska University Hospital. I did also produce online videos. I've written freelance articles for, amongst others, Chalmers University of Technology, Göteborgs-Posten and GU Journalen. I've been an information officer for the School of Global Studies (University of Gothenburg). There, I did translations between Swedish and English, wrote journalistic articles and was responsible for updating the web site in InfoGlue. Over time, I have upheld different positions as a journalist, information officer or copywriter.

I did for two and a half years work as a journalist at the local Gothenburg paper "På Plats i Väster" and the health magazine "Hälsa och friskvård". One of my first media positions was as a writer at the City Museum of Mölndal. There, I wrote and edited journalistic and feature articles, commercial ads, and was the editor of two museum exhibition catalogues. I created and executed communication strategies, took a great responsibility for translating the web site into English and did proofreading.

In June 2001, I graduated from the journalism programme at JMG (University of Gothenburg). I am creative, sociable, and analytical. Experienced in holding oral presentations from my university studies and from a position as a senior high school teacher of Latin. I work easily both individually and in groups. Proficient in gathering, structuring, creating, and analyzing information.
