Charity No. 1127144
Serving God, Serving the Community

Dear Friends.

I return from a very busy and nostalgic week away from you. Busy, because I went to a wedding in a barn (I still think the church does it better but it was lovely), visiting family and friends and journey around the North and West Norfolk Coast.

Up until I was 22, my family and we went every summer to Kings Lynn in Norfolk to visit my dad's family. There were certain required rituals in this time. We visited aunts and cousins, and they came to us at my grandparent's house. There was a trip to the Tuesday market and a morning at Castle Rising. We also toured the seaside towns. Cromer was always bitterly cold – and I can confirm it still is relatively so, and Sheringham stays in my mind for being windy. Wells next the Sea was great for the amusement arcade and an ice-cream. It has been modernised but changed little. We always spent one morning at the fair in Hunstanton. That has been gone for many years and I would hardly know the place but for the water tower that sits on the hill above it now surrounded by houses on land which was once green fields. Finally, I went to Heacham.

Heacham has a special place in my heart. I could tell you that I was always happy in that place. I could recount many funny stories like the time my inquisitive father walked swiftly towards a curious box far out from the shoreline, only to be shouted at by an irate man who was trying to warn him to leave the area as the were about to detonate an unexploded bomb. Thankfully all was well, and the story has been a source of laughter ever since.

In truth, our afternoons at Heacham were not always perfect. On a cold windy day, the wind was bitter and the shingle filled sand was whipped up into our eyes. The tide could go out for miles leaving not sand but thick sticky mud and putting a bunch of adults and children into a small beach hut for the afternoon could always bring trouble. However, I prefer to remember the sunshine and the incredibly warm water that is a feature of The Wash. It was a place for kite flying and sandcastle building as well as picking up cockles which were later boiled at home creating a fishy stench in my grandparent's home. However, I have come to realise my memories are imperfect. That many things that I have forgotten are clear in my brother's mind and vice versa. Often, we have slightly different memories of the same events. I am sure that you have similar conversations with family and friends. All in the same place, sometimes the same room but with a variation in the memory. As the queen famously wrote of a situation in her own family, 'Recollections may vary.'

As I walked on the beach for a short time last week I was struck by the obvious realisation that I am so changed from the little girl who went there 50 years ago though those places, events and people have helped form who I am now.

Given that we accept there is variation in the way we perceive and recall things, I wonder why some people can get so worked up by the differences in the four gospel stories, as though these variations mean that the accounts we find there are not real. For me the differences affirm the validity of such writing. The accounts are written by individuals. Of course there are variations.

The other thing that I was thinking on my travels is that change should not surprise us though humanity is often disturbed by it. Scripture tells us that the only thing in a believer's life that remains constant it God. Hebrews 13.8 tells us that, 'Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today and for ever.' In 1 Samuel 2:2 Hannah sings with joy at the gift of the birth of Samuel. She says "There is no one holy like the Lord, Indeed, there is no one besides You, nor is there any rock like our God."

I encourage those of you who have not done so for a while to lift your Bible and read or listen to its pages. I encourage those of you who have not done so for a while to attend a church service. I encourage you all to build your life on God who is our rock. I can testify that sands shift and change, life has many ups and down, things change but the Lord God is with you and available and constant in our world and in the lives of all who turn to him.

May God bless you in all that you do this week,

Big Breakfast on Saturday 26th July

It will be held in the centre from 9.30 am. No need to book, just get the word out and attend. The cost is £5. Do invite friends to come along.

Silent Disco

This is taking place on Saturday 26th July in the upstairs room of Bromborough Social club. You pay £10 and get a headset. You listen to the type of music that you like. Most popular music tastes catered for. It's funny watching people dancing to different sounds. Bar available. All welcome but you need to be able to climb the social club stairs! The other good thing is that if you switch off the headset you can talk to each other because the room is quiet! Don't want to come? That's ok but do you know family members who might be interested? Please let them know. For tickets speak to Carol Jones.

Rector's day off

Just to remind people that currently my day off is on Monday. When you Whatsapp message me and say, 'I know it's your day off but...' know that on some Mondays that is a lot of messages to ignore. I work Tuesday- Sunday inclusive. Occasionally, I work Monday too as in next week but it is not the norm. Thanks for your understanding. Jenny
