CrossTab Analysis

Introduction	3364
Weekly Top 30 Side by Side	3365

Welcome to 2024

The UK Singles chart in 2024 was markedly different from the chart that began in 1952. In 1952, singles were sold in shops, usually between Monday and Saturday and were large black round discs with a hole in the middle. By 2024 the dominant format was the Streaming track, with the consumer paying for the right to access a streaming service (The largest seemingly Apple Music) who had a library of music and those are what could be listened to. Homes also had a large collection of Smart Speakers, devices that, on command, would play whatever the listener requested – from the catalogue they were renting. This led to the rise of the Curated Playlist, which was a set of music picked, either by the software based on your own listening tastes (mine is rather weird as I listen to a lot of the charting music as I add a year to the database meaning it's currently listening to an eclectic mix of R&B, Country and Hip Hop from 1993!), or selected from those others had listened to. The Year To Date chart for 2024 – which shows the most streamed and sold tracks of the year cumulatively each week – listed the same record at the top for the full year – Noah Kahan and Stick Season – and while that only spent 7 weeks at the top, it was removed from the summit due to a chart rule called ACR, meaning that after 10 weeks on release the amount of streams weighting is halved, so a track needs twice as many to maintain its chart position. Artificial? Possibly, but it stops the same song hitting the top and staying there for months on end. The Billboard Hot 100 – without any such rule – had, in 2024, Shaboozey with 'A Bar Song (Tipsy)' at the top for 19 non-consecutive weeks and was number 1 (with 2 small dips) from 13 July to 30 November. In the UK we managed 9 weeks at the top (non-consecutively) for Sabrina Carpenter.

And, in the UK, 2024 was the year of Sabrina Carpenter. She managed to do something the Beatles did first and very few have done since – dethrone herself from the top of the chart. Her 21 weeks at the top of the chart amount to almost half a year and, while the run was broken, she was at the top almost from 9 May to 31 Oct with only 3 weeks for other acts (Eminem for 2 weeks and Charli xcx & Billie Eilish).

The rise of the playlist meant that Wham started and ended the year at the top as the Annual Christmas Takeover meant they claimed the first and last number 1 of the year. In prior years they had managed to drop entirely out of the Top 100, but that – based on the dates of Christmas Day – did not happen this year. It may well happen in 2025, when Christmas Day falls on a Thursday and so Last Christmas is unlikely to get very many plays at all from 26-31 Dec 2025.

This annual contains a number of UK Singles charts, including, for the first time, a Billboard produced Singles chart of the UK. Running to 25 positions, it closely matches the Milward Brown chart but appears to not have the same exclusion rules in place. I have also included the Big Top 40. While many do consider this chart 'made up', I feel it is worthwhile as those who listen hear newer tracks which they then stream in the week, affecting the chart position on the main chart.

It should be noted that the Hit Log numbers may well differ substantially from that in my 70 Years series as I have now added in the 1983-1994 Gallup Top 200 charts to the main UK Singles database, resulting in about 10,000 new entries being added. This also affects all time weeks on chart positions as well as biggest drops within the chart, etc.

I'd like to thank ChartsPlus for providing the charts, and please purchase a subscription to that publication for weekly charts including Album charts Top 200 and Scottish and Welsh charts, unavailable anywhere else (Amongst others!) More details may be found here <https://www.ukchartsplus.co.uk/index.htm>

Year End 2024

Chart Milestones

2024 contains a Top 100 compiled by Milward Brown. The Top 75 is printed in Music Week via their subscriber chart pack for the entire year, with the Top 100 printed in ChartsPlus.

- 4 Jan First chart of the year. The Music Week printing carries a note “The Official UK Singles and Albums Charts are compiled by the Official Charts Company, based on a sample of more than 15,000 physical and digital outlets. They count actual sales and audio streams from last Friday to Thursday, incorporating seven-inch, 12-inch vinyl, cassettes, CDs, LPs, digital bundles, downloads and weighted audio streams.”
- 26 Dec The final chart of the year.

It should be noted that some records have not been documented in other sources before, due to the nature of the chart. The result is that information is very scarce for those records and so sometimes Composer credits and/or durations are missing. Equally, artists may be inadvertently sorted under groups when single artists or vice versa. These are all errors due to minimal information about the record concerned. Corrected data gratefully received.

The Number Ones

It's Number One – it's Pick Of The Pops!

All the chart countdown shows presented on any radio station would end with the biggest seller, and would spend their allotted duration teasing the listener as to who would be number 1. I, personally, remember listening to Mark Goodier count down the Radio 1 Top 40 in the early 2000's and teasing the new number 1. Getting to the top was the goal of all chart artists – making their way to the top to be the best seller of the last seven days.

Over the years a range of eclectic records have held the top spot – from the first in 1952 all the way through to almost a new number a week in the early 2000's, to an average of about 15 or so as the charts draw towards their 70th birthday. All that is of course helped by chart rules of inclusion and what the public are buying and, more recently, streaming.

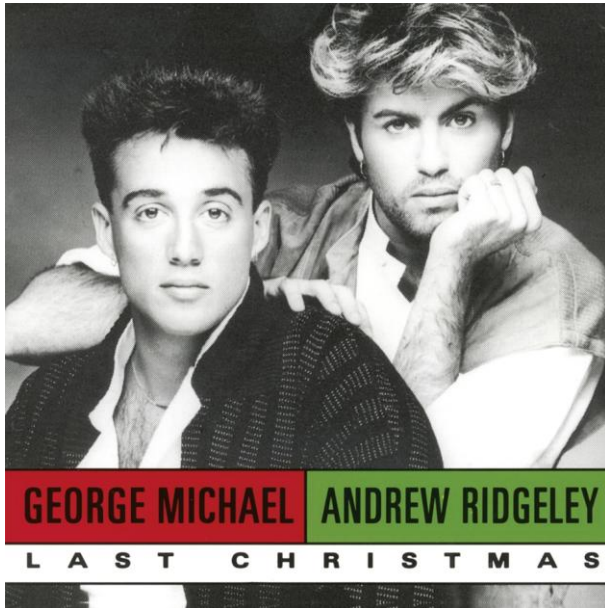

This listing is the full listing of each and every number 1 record that hit the top during this year, in order, starting with the first one at the start of the year, listing how many weeks at the top and then the number of the number 1 in the sequence from the first in 1952, the title, the artist and, for the first time, an image of the cover (or the label for the 78 or 45's before 1992). It should be noted that while all records are listed with the 78 RPM number, if such was issued, a number of records are shown with a cover from the 45 release, to give variety to the images shown.

The Statistics

Over the course of the 72 years that make up the UK Singles charts, 70,446 records have charted, made by thousands upon thousands of artists, groups, bands or cartoon characters. One of the things I like is to look at how the list of the Most Weeks On Chart Artists changes over time.

The listing showcases firstly, the ranking in the previous year and then the current year (with symbols for climb or drop) and then the artists peak reached that year, followed by the weeks they spent on the chart. Also shown are weeks added this calendar year and if that has changed their overall peak (with the previous year's peak shown for comparison). The entry and exit dates for the artist are shown, with those exiting in the current year shown in bold. An artist exiting this year with a similar peak and week count is always ranked higher than one exiting at an earlier date. Watch as your favourite artist climbs (or fails to climb!) this listing. The database compiles the entire listing, so once over 500 artists have charted, climbs into the 500 will be recorded and the last week column will show positions in the previous year from outside the Top 500.

After this comes a listing of the new entries to this listing, for all artists, even if they are not new to the Top 500, so a new artists location can be seen more easily.

The third Top 500 listing showcases weeks on chart, exactly the same as the first in every way, simply limiting the data set to just the Top 75. This is because many people view the charts as the old Guinness books did and as Music Week do, as a Top 75, so showing that weeks on chart listing is important.

Finally, we list a Top 500 focusing on just weeks on chart during this decade. The previous decades position is included, with the climbs or falls shown, together with the change in weeks on chart and peak position this decade over the previous also highlighted.

Lastly for this section is a listing of the most weeks on chart for a record in this year.

The Top 500 Most Weeks On Chart Artists

The listing here is the Top 500 Artists based on weeks in the chart (defined as the full charts as listed in the database), sorted by total weeks, then by most recent exit date, with a more recent exit ranked higher than an older one, and finally alphabetically by artist. Rank in the previous year, 2023, is shown as is the additional weeks currently charting artists have added over last year, and any change in peak position.

The Annual

Joel Whitburn famously used to store his record collection by year, then by peak position reached. He said he used to like to pull out a draw and listen to records peaking at, say, number 62 in 1967 to listen to records he may not have heard in 10, 20, 30 years. This way of sorting gave him the idea for the Pop Annual book, a major staple of his book series.

Whilst Joel has done this for America, nobody has done the same sort of thing for the UK charts – until now.

My listing differs ever so slightly to his in that it is restricted to the calendar year, so the listing reflects all charts between 1 January and 31 December of the year in question. The listing then ranks all the records that peaked at number 1 in that year, with the longest run at the top listed first, followed by those that peaked at 2, etc. Each record is given a number in the year, based on this ordering.

I find it fascinating to look through this listing to see what records peaked – or failed to peak – at a position. For example, did you know that only 1 record peaked at number 5 in 1952? And that only 1 record peaked at 40 in 1963? The database records 2755 records charting in 1995, only 3 peaked at 124 – the least of any chart position that year. All of this can easily be seen from this type of listing and it gives a new way of interacting with the chart data.

Entry, Peak and Exit dates (within the calendar year) are shown, as are weeks on the chart, in the Top 75 (which began in 1978), the Top 50 (beginning in 1960), the Top 40 (beginning in 1956 when NME started a Top 30), the Top 10 and at the peak position. Then we have the ranking number within the year itself, title, artist, length and catalogue details.

The Hit Log

The Hit Log lists, in order of first entry date and then entry position, every record to appear in the chart since it began. This list shows all entries that charted during the year 2024, meaning entries that first charted in prior years are also shown. The information is sorted by number in the sequence of charting records. Entry position is the entry position when first charting, while both Peak Position and weeks on chart refer to the records entire chart run, sometimes across multiple years.

CrossTab Analysis Multi Charts

The final pages here showcase the weekly Top 30's of 2024 from the seven listed charts within this volume.

The aim is to showcase the similarities and the differences. Records are ranked by their peak in that week across all the charts shown. Only those records in the Top 30 on any chart are shown, with any positions outside the Top 30 shown as appropriate for comparison if the record charts in the Top 30 on other charts.

Weekly Charts Side By Side

Lists all the records to appear on the charts shown, linked to show each track once. When the title as listed on the different charts is different (for example if a record was a double A-Side or a single side for the majority of the run) then the record will be listed on a different line. Some charts may be shown in the header with no data if none is included for the specific week shown. Data is sorted by highest position across all the charts, then by Artist and finally title.
