

Publishing with The Turban Times

Dear contributor,

Thank you for choosing to publish with The Turban Times, we look forward to cooperating. Before you start working on your piece, we kindly ask you to read this document thoroughly:

▪ Process

- To keep the writing in line with our style and policies, the editor may propose changes to the article and will ultimately have the decisive say. The writer and editor, however, will be in dialogue continuously.
- Contact between editor and writer will take place via email and editing via Google Docs.

▪ Media

- We encourage including media material in your writing – preferably, if possible, your own work. If you use the work of others, make sure you have permission to do so and inform your editor of the relevant details.
- All pictures require credit (name of author) and preferably a caption (short description, location, date).

▪ Reuse of work

- You are free to republish your final article. We require, however, that the site you crosspost with include the original publisher, as well as a link to the original version.
- We reserve the right to republish your work with our partners that we crosspost with and other platforms (with a credit/link to the original author and publisher). If you don't agree with this, you will need to inform us.
- If you oppose The Turban Times reusing the media material that you include in your work, and which you are the owner of, in our work in general, you will need to inform us of this.

▪ Note

- Our editors reserve the right to reject writings that don't meet our standards and policies, as well as articles that deviate too much from the originally approved pitch.
- As The Turban Times is currently a volunteer-based project and we don't have the necessary funds for it, we won't be able to offer compensation for your work.

To get started, send a detailed description of your idea to info@theturbantimes.com and one of our editors will get back to you ASAP.
