SO YOU WANT TO BE A SUCCESSFUL CELEBRANT?

Becoming an independent celebrant is not a career choice for everyone.

Candidates for the UK Society of Celebrants celebrant training courses would benefit from having had experience speaking in public or at least having no reservations with the prospect of speaking in public.

Similarly, access to and confidence in the use of a computer (to access the internet and word processing) will be of a considerable benefit to all candidates.

TERMINOLOGY

Arguably, there is confusion within the celebrant industry with regards to terminology used when referring to celebrants. To alleviate this confusion we have simplified the terms that follow in order that anyone reading this is clear of our interpretation.

A family celebrant is a celebrant that can design, write and deliver wedding ceremonies / civil partnership ceremonies, Renewal of Vows ceremonies, naming ceremonies and any other life event ceremonies that are conventionally accepted as being joyous and happy in nature. People referred to as a wedding celebrant can also be known as a family celebrant.

RELIGION?

The United Kingdom Society of Celebrants caters predominantly for secular celebrants, that is to say that religion is of little significance in our training and practice. That said, we have trained many celebrants who come from a wide range of faith backgrounds that have gone on to develop niches in specific ethnic / cultural groups.

A funeral celebrant is a celebrant that can design, write and officiate over a funeral ceremonies, memorials, commemorations or other life event ceremonies that are conventionally accepted as dealing with a death or loss.

A civil celebrant is a celebrant who can practice as both a family and funeral celebrant. All the above definitions may also be prefixed with one or more of the following as is your want: independent, secular, humanist, non-denominational, spiritual or atheist to name but a few.

TESTIMONIALS

Julia Hill | Family and Funeral Celebrant

For close on eight years now, I have been working as a family and funeral celebrant. With excellent training in place by UKSOC and a trusted mentor always available if needed, I have been privileged to conduct ceremonies for folks from all walks of life, all situations. The sharing of these stories is always a great honour - and in this my life story is enriched beyond measure. This has truly changed my life.

Choosing to train through the United Kingdom Society of Celebrants, has by far been the best and most life changing decision I have ever made. The training and mentorship are of the highest quality, and ongoing support means I never have to face a situation without being prepared. UKSOC remain committed to excellence on all levels and push me as a member to always go above and beyond; remaining committed to what I do on every level.

Cindy Groves | Family and Funeral Celebrant

I trained as a civil celebrant in 2014 and have loved being a celebrant from the start. It is the start. It is the interaction with humanity that brings me joy. I get the most satisfaction from a funeral, but a good wedding is uplifting and helps to ring the changes.

The UK Society of Celebrants is a good organisation, the mentors and team are supportive and a pleasure to work with.

I am regularly complimented on the quality of my work and this is down to the thorough training and ongoing advice from my colleagues.
